

Bequest Information and Sample Language

The National Partnership for Women & Families envisions a just and equitable society in which all women and families can live with dignity, respect and security; every person has the opportunity to achieve their potential; and no person is held back by discrimination or bias. Your legacy can make that vision a reality.

A simple way to establish your legacy is to designate the National Partnership for Women & Families as a beneficiary of your will and trust. You can designate a specific dollar amount; a particular asset such as securities; or leave a percentage of your estate or the residual of your estate after providing for loved ones.

The sample bequest language below is not intended as legal, financial, or other professional advice. The language provided below is only to be used as an example. Be sure to consult with an attorney or other qualified advisor when making or revising your will or estate plans.
